DICTIONARY;

COMPREHENDING

The Derivations of the Generality of Words in the English Tongue, either Ancient or Modern, from the Ancient British, Saxon, Danish, Norman, and Modern French, Teutonic, Dutch, Spanish, Italian; as also from the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew Languages, each in their proper Characters.

AND ALSO

A brief and clear Explication of all difficult Words, derived from any of the aforesaid Languages, and Terms of Art,
relating to ANATOMY, BOTANY, PHYSICK, PHARMACY, SURGERY, CHYMISTRY, PHILOSOPHY, DIVINITY, MA-THEMATICS, GRAMMAR, LOGICK, RHETORICK, MUSICK, HERALDRY, MARITIME AFFAIRS, MILITARY DISCI-PLINE, HORSEMANSHIP, HUNTING, HAWKING, FOWL-
ING, FISHING, GARDENING, HUSBANDRY, HANDI-CRAFTS, CONFECTIONARY, CARVING, COOKERY, &c.

TOGETHER WITH

A large Collection and Explication of Words and Phrases used in our Ancient STATUTES, CHARTERS, WRITS, OLD RECORDS, and PROCESSES in Law; and the Etymology, and Interpretation of the Proper Names of MEN, WOMEN, and remarkable Places in Great Britain: Also the DIALECTS of our different Countries.

Containing many Thousand Words more than either Harris,
Philips, Kersey, or any English Dictionary before extant.

To which is added,

A Collection of our most common PROVERBS, with their Explication and Illustration.

The whole Work compiled and methodically digested, as well for the Entertainment of the Curious, as the Information of the Ignorant; and for the Benefit of young Students, Artificers, Tradesmen, and Foreigners, who are desirous thoroughly to understand what they Speak, Read, or Write:

TWENTY-FOURTH EDITION.

SCALIGER, who was very far from being overburthened with piety, whenever Lexicographers were mentioned, is said very devoutly to have thanked God, that, of his infinite goodness, he had endowed some men with the spirit of Dictionary-making. This celebrated Hypercritic deemed the task of compiling Lexicons and Dictionaries, to be so tedious and toilsome an office, that he thought it was impossible that any man would voluntarily choose such a profession, either as an amusement or an occupation, who had not a mind peculiarly formed by heaven for collecting words and measuring syllables, and that had not, by a special decree, been ordained of old to this condemnation. There is great truth in this remark, for the province of making Indexes, and of constructing a Thesaurus, is of so complicated and arduous a nature, that some of God's creatures, in successive centuries, appear to have been, by his divine benevolence, originally predestinated to this great and useful end, and to have been formed with a passion for words and syllables, and quantity and metre, in the same manner as connections of a tenderer and more elegant species, are justly pronounced to be first made in the mansions of bliss. This wise appointment of heaven, in adapting various minds to the various pursuits and occupations of this life, transcendently appears in this great and momentous concern; for from a review of the history of mankind it is manifest, that only three or four persons in a century, in learned and civilized nations, have been raised up by Providence, at awful intervals, to amass words 'till the heap gradually accumulated into numerous and enormous volumes. Considering the brevity and uncertainty of our transitory existence, the various necessities and avocations of life, and the frailty and instability of our intellectual powers, the exertion and labour is more than Heracleian, to address oneself to a collection of volumes, with the sole view of culling words; enumerating phrases, interpreting peculiar modes of expression, ascertaining the meaning of obscure idioms, determining the quantity of syllables, and discriminating the diversities that obtain in different writers, in every the minutest department of verbal criticism. Wits and wifings; indeed; in all ages and nations, have united in making the Compilation of Dictionaries; and the Composers of them, the constant object of their derision and ridicule. Such occupation has been marked with the opprobrious definition of plodding without a spark of genius; has been ignominiously termed drudgery only fit for the frigid and phlegmatic souls of Dutchmen and Germans; the authors of such useful Compilations have been petulantly reproached as Word-catchers that live on Syllables, and as men, who know the meaning of one word separately employed, but totally ignorant of the same word when artificially combined with two or three others. To the honour and consolation of the shades of Lexicographers let it be mentioned, that their names will be perpetuated and their labours commemorated with celebrity and renown; when the names of their petulant Assailants will be forgotten, and their works sunk in everlasting oblivion and contempt. The Crown is still fresh on the hoary temples of HENRY STEVENS, the boast of France, and with undecaying verdure entwines, and will for ever entwine the venerable brows of our illustrious Johnson; the glory of the British nation, as long as the English tongue is spoken, and centuries, it may be, after it shall have ceased to be a living Language.

On a review of various literary labours which have been executed, it appears that some of the greatest works that adorn the Republic of Letters, for the completion of which the whole amount of human life seems scarce to be sufficient, have been undertaken and completed by a few individuals, with no assistance, and with but little emolument. What a vast Building is the Greek Lexicon of HENRY STEVENS! What an immense number of Books must have been perused and criticized by this most excellent Scholar! How many days, months, and years must have been sedulously expended on this great work, which redounds so much to the glory of the age and nation in which he flourished! We read of no Patron that Hesychius and Phavorinus and Phaber had. Scapula, Constantine, and Hederic make no mention of their Dictionaries being published by subscription,

and themselves rewarded by Princes with pensions. Heaven had adopted their minds to their profession. Smitten therefore with the passion of literature, infligated by a strong perception of the future utility of their labours, and, amidst all their toils, cheered with the exhilarating consciousness that they were facilitating the path of knowledge, freeing it from its difficulties and perplexities, and opening the sources of the more elegant and substantial satisfactions to thousands and millions, they rose up early, and sat up late, ate the bread of labour and penury, deeming nothing executed while any part of their original design remained unfinished.

It is true, the wisdom and munificence of Empires have combined a number of learned and ingenious persons into Associations for this most laudable and useful purpose, namely, framing ample and accurate Dictionaries of the national Language. They justly thought that the honour of their respective countries and the purity and stability of their native tongues would be essentially consulted by such Institutions. In consequence of these liberal and enlarged ideas, the world is now indebted for that most accurate and consummate work the Dictionary of the French Academy, for the celebrated Italian Dictionary, known by the name of La Crusca, and for the great Dictionary, lately published at Madrid, of the Spanish Language.

But individuals of immense erudition and of unremitting application, have, in the course of a long life, at last, with glory, accomplished, unassisted, what Royal Academies, national Universities, and Religious orders have united to complete. The Hebrew Lexicon of Dr. TAYLOR, and the English Dictionary of Dr. JOHNSON, are everlasting Monuments, what the patient application and indefatigable industry of one man can effect.

One of these illustrious Literati, in a very eminent degree was the learned and worthy Mr. BAILEY, the Compiler of this Dictionary, and the Author of several useful Publications. The Character of BAILEY's Dictionary hath long been deservedly established, and through a series of many years hath acquired a just reputation, which all the numerous compilations we have lately seen hath not been able to eclipse. Few have deserved better of mankind, than Mr. BAILEY. He was a diligent Instructor of youth, and hath long furnished our Schools with several excellent Helps for acquiring the Roman Language. That he was a good Classical Scholar, that he was eminently acquainted with several modern Languages, that he was well versed in English Antiquities, and that he had acquired a comprehensive knowledge of Arts and sciences, this DICTIONARY will for ever evince. The peculiar and unrivaled Excellence of this Work is the definition friction and explanation of many hundred technical terms, which belong to respective Sciences, which are not found in other Dictionaries. Particularly are the terms in Anatomy, Physic, Natural Philosophy, and the Mathematics concisely and familiarly illustrated in this Thesaurus. In short, its principal excellence is, that it is a Scholastic Dictionary, and more useful to common Readers, especially to persons in the Country, than any Dictionary hitherto published. The Etymological part is written in plain and easy language, the hard and obscure words not rendered harder and obscurer by a studied pomp and affectation of diction, but every thing is treated with perspicuity as well as erudition, Mr. BAILEY possessing a happy method of communicating his ideas.

This ample and useful Treasury of the English Language I have lately enjoyed an opportunity of correcting, for in its transmission from Printer to Printer, it had necessarily contracted an immense multitude of errors; the last Edition, as usual, being disgraced with more imperfections than the preceding. Numerous mistakes of this nature, particularly in the Etymological part, I have attended, and have added above two hundred words to a Collection already very ample.

I have only to add, that if I can contribute any advantage, however inconsiderable, to the Republic of Letters, and accomplish any thing that may conduce to the instruction of mankind, I shall deem my time and talents well employed in this short and transitory life, and at the conclusion of it, which will soon arrive, with conscious satisfaction reflect, that I have not lived and written in vain.

INTRODUCTION.

THE Faculty of Speech, which makes so considerable a Difference between a Man and a Brute, is of excellent Use; as it renders Mankind conversable one with another, and as the various natural Endowments; Observations; Experiences, and Attainments of every individual Man, are hereby, with a wonderful Facility, mutually communicated. And we may add to this the Invention of Letters, by means of which we are not confined within the narrow Limits of our Acquaintance and Cotemporaries, but one Man may be acquainted with the Attainments of Multitudes of the wisest Men in Present and Ancient Times, either in his own or remote Countries. Words are those Channels, by which the Knowledge of Things is convey'd to our Understandings: And therefore, upon a right Apprehension of them depends the Rectitude of our Notions; and in order to form our Judgments right, they must be understood in their proper Meaning, used in their true Sense, either in Writing or Speaking: For, if the Words of the Speaker or Writer, though ever so apposite to the Matter, be taken in a wrong Sense, they form erroneous Ideas in the Mind concerning the Thing spoken of or written of; and if we use Words in a false and improper Sense, this causes Confusion in the Understanding of the Hearer, and renders the Discourse unintelligible.

It ought, therefore, to be the special Care and Study of every one, who would have his Mind furnished with the useful Knowledge of Things of any kind, to get a true and distinct Idea of the proper Sense and Meaning of Words, and Terms of Art, in which they are expressed, without which no good Progress can be made.

INTRODUCTION.

It has therefore been the universal Practice of all polite Nations, to make the Study of Letters the first Business of Life ; And because this Accomplishment is necessary to all Persons, and but few, comparatively speaking, have the Advantage of a learned Education to any considerable Proficiency, Dictionaries have in all Languages been compiled, to which, as to Store-houses, such Persons may have Recourse, as often as any thing occurs in Conversation or Reading, with which they are unacquainted, or when they themselves would speak or write properly and intelligibly.

And as such Helps have been thought useful in all civilized Nations, they appear more eminently necessary in the English Tongue, not only because it is, perhaps, the most copious Language of any in Europe, but is likewise made up of so great a Variety of other Languages, both Ancient and Modern, as will plainly appear to any one who shall peruse the following Dictionary. Of the Reason of which Mixture, and by what Accidents it was brought about, I shall give the following Account.

That Languages are liable to Changes and Alterations (besides that ancient Confusion of Tongues at the Building of the Tower of Babel) there have been too many Instances to require any Proof. The Causes of Change in Languages are, in general, Three :

First, Commigrations or Conquests of Nations, by which, in Tract of Time, there succeeds a Coalition of the Languages of the Conquerors with the Conquered. So the Italian Language sprang from the Latin, being mixed with German-Gothick : The Spanish from Latin, German, and ancient Gaulish or Mortisco : The French from the Latin, German, and ancient Gaulish or Gallick.

Secondly, From Commerce, by which Offices, Dignities, the Names of Wares, and Terms of Traffick, are introduced, which we commonly take with the Wares from the Persons of whom we have them, and new-form them according to the Genius of our own Tongue.

Thirdly, From the Esteem and valuable Properties of any particular Language, by which we endeavour to imitate this or that Tongue, as the more Learned, Elegant, Copious, or Expressive. So learned Men all over Europe esteem the Latin and Greek Tongues, as the Treasuries of all Science ; Christian Divines reverence the Hebrew and Greek ; the Turks and Mahometans the Arabick, as the Mistress of Religion ; the Dutch, Germans

and English, the French, for its Softness and Smoothness of Expression; the Danes and Suedes, the Teutonic, as, more copious.

If a Tongue be once esteemed more learned, from thence the Learned commonly borrow Technical Words, or Words of Art; as in Physick, Philosophy, Mathematicks, and others, from the Greek. If it be esteemed more elegant or fine in Pronunciation, then Courtiers, who are apt to dislike any thing that is common, and the Product of their own Country, and to delight in what is foreign, borrow a great many Words of Complaisance and Address.

First, The ancient Language of Britain is generally allowed to have been the same with the Gaulic or French (this Island, in all Probability, having been first peopled from Gallia) as both Cæsar and Tacitus affirm, and prove, by many strong and conclusive Arguments, as by their Religion, Manners, Customs, and the Nearness of their Situation. But now we have very small Remains of the ancient British Tongue left in England, except in Wales and Cornwall; which will not appear strange when what follows is considered.

Julius Cæsar, some Time before the Birth of our Saviour, in the Time of King Cassivellane, made a Descent upon England, tho' he rather discover'd it than made a Conquest of it; but about the Year of Christ 45, in the Time of Claudius, Aulus Plautius was sent over with some Roman Forces, by whom, and P. Ostorius Scapula, Codigunus, and Caractacus, two Kings of the Britons, were severally overcome in a Battle. A Roman Colony was planted at Malden in Essex, and the Southern Parts thereof reduced to the Form of a Roman Province; and after that, the Whole was conquered, as far as the Friths of Dumbarton and Edinburgh, by Agricola, in the Time of Domitian; and the Remains of the unconquered Britons retired to the West Part, called Wales, carrying their Language with them over the Mountains, where they have preserved it to this Day.

Britain being thus become a Roman Province, tho' still suffered to be governed by Kings of its own, as Vice-Roys under the Roman Emperors, the Roman Legions residing in Britain for the Space of above two hundred Years, undoubtedly disseminated the Latin Tongue; and the People being also governed by Laws written in Latin, must necessarily make a Mixture of Languages. This seems to have been the first Mutation the Language of Britain suffered: However, so tenacious were our Forefathers of their Native Language, that it over-grew the Roman.

Thus

INTRODUCTION.

Thus the British Tongue continued for some time mixed with Provincial Latin, till the Roman Legions being called home, upon account of intestine Troubles, about the Year 423, the Scots and Picts, taking the Advantage of their Absence, harrassed the Northern Parts of Britain; against whom King Vortigern, about the Year 440, call'd in the Assistance of the Saxons, a Great and Potent Nation among the Germans, in the Dukedom of Holstein, but greater by the Aggregation of many People under their Name and Service, as the Jutes from Jutland, and the Angles from Sleswick; who coming hither under the Conduct of Hengist and Horsa, having overcome the Picts and Scots in a pitched Battle, near Stamford in Lincolnshire, were afterwards rewarded for this Victory with the Isle of Thanet, and after that with the whole County of Kent, where they governed for about 350 Years, under the Titles of Earls of Kent; but they growing powerful, began afterwards to quarrel with their Landlords, whom by Degrees they dispossessed of all the Country on this Side the Severn, parcelling it out into seven Kingdoms, called the Saxon Heptarchy, destroying the British Tongue, then mixed with the Provincial Latin, together with the Inhabitants, by a long and destructive War, the Remains of them being again obliged to retire with the British Tongue over the Mountains of Wales.

Thus the British Language being in a manner quite extinct in all other Parts of Britain, the Saxon Language became the Language of the Country, and so continued till near the Year 800, when the Danes infested England, and made Settlements in the North and East Parts of Britain, and at length, in about 200 Years, arrived at the sole Government of it; but their Government lasting only about 26 Years, made not so considerable a Change in the English Saxon, as the next Revolution: Then about the Year 1067, William Duke of Normandy, commonly called William the Conqueror, came over to Britain; and, having vanquished Harold the Danish King, made an entire Conquest of Britain: And as a Monument of their Conquest, the Normans endeavoured to yoke the English under their Tongue, as they had them under their Command, by compelling them to teach their Children in their Schools nothing but the French, by publishing their Laws in French, and by enforcing them most rigorously to plead and be impleaded in that Tongue, for the Space of about 350 Years: By which means the Language of Britain became a Dialect of the English Saxon, and Norman French, which now are the Ground-work or Fundamentals of the present Language of Great Britain.

Having thus shewn how the ancient British Language was in a manner extirpated by the Romans, Danes, and Saxons, and sub-

INTRODUCTION.

succeeded by the Saxon, and after that, the Saxon blended with the Norman French. Before I proceed to account for the Alteration of the English Saxon, by the two other Causes, I shall mention something relating to the Saxon Tongue, of a great Part of which the Normans despoiled us, giving us a worse for a better. “Great, verily (says Camden) was the Glory of our Tongue before the Norman Conquest, in this, that the Old English could express most aptly all the Conceptions of the Mind in their own Tongue, without borrowing from any.” And of this gives the following Examples.

The Service of God, called Religion, they called San-farncap, as the only Assurance and fast Anchor-hold of our Souls Health.

The Gladsome Tidings of Salvation, which the Greeks call Εὐαγγέλιον, they called Γεοργ-γρολ, i. e. God's Speech.

Our Saviour, in French Sauveur, of Saluator, Lat. they called Al-hæot, i. e. All Health.

The Pharisees, Sunder halgens, i. e. Religious Men, which had sundered and separated themselves from the Men of the World.

The Scribes, Boo-Meas, i. e. Book-Men.

The Sacrament, Paligoom, i. e. Holy Judgment.

Fertility, Coþser Wole, i. e. the Wealth of the Earth.

The Judgment, Dome-þeole, i. e. the Settling of Doom.

A Parliament, Wættan-mot, i. e. an Assembly of Wise Men.

Conscience, Inpre, i. e. that which they did inwardly wot or know certainly.

Also the Names they gave to their Months were significant; as,

JANUARY [Wulfo-Wonað, Sax. i. e. Wolf-Month] because in that Month the Wolves were most mischievous to them, for that, through the Extremity of Cold and Snow, they could not find Beasts sufficient to satisfy their ravenous Appetites.

FEBRUARY [Sprout-Kele, Sax. i. e. Cole-Wort or Spring-Wort] because then Worts begin to sprout.

MARCH [Lenct Wonað, Sax. i. e. the Lengthening Month] because then the Days begin in Length to exceed the Nights.

APRIL [Oortep-Wonað, Sax.] because their Easter generally fell in April.

MAY [Tju-milci, Sax. i. e. three Milkings] because they then milk'd their Cattle three Times a Day.

JUNE [Mede-Wonað, Sax. i. e. Meadow-Month] because then their Cattle were turned out to feed in the Meadows.

JULY [Þey-Wonað, Sax. i. e. Hay-Month] because then they generally cut their Hay.

AUGUST [Apra-Wonað, Sax. i. e. Barn-Month] because they then filled their Barns.

SEPTEMBER [Leþre-Wonað, Sax. i. e. Grift-Month] because they carried their new Corn to the Mill.

OCTOBER [Wyn-Wonað, Sax. i. e. Wine-Month] because then Grapes were usually pressed to make Wines.

NOVEMBER [Wynde-Wonað, Sax. i. e. Windy-Month] because of the high Winds happening commonly in that Month.

DECEMBER [Wynter-Wonað, Sax. i. e. Winter-Month] because of the Cold then growing intense, and afterwards, Þælig-Wonað, Sax. i. e. Haly-Month] on account of the Nativity of Christ.

I N T R O D U C T I O N .

I shall only add one Piece of Saxon Antiquity more, and so proceed, which is the Lord's Prayer in the Saxon Language, written about the Year of Christ 900, by Alfred Bishop of Durham.

Vren fader ðic arð in þeofnas ric gehalgod ðin noma
 Our Father which art in Heavens be hallowed thine Name to cymes ðin ric ric ðin willa sue is in þeofnas and come thy Kingdom be thy Will so as in Heavens and in Gornðo. Vnea hlaf oþer wite the gel vr to dæg and for-in Earth. Our Loaf superubstantial give us to Day and for-gef vr sylða unna sue. we forþeþan sylðogum vrum, and give us Debts our so we forgive Debts ours, and no inleað vris in curþung. Al gefþug vruch from yle, do not lead us into Temptation, but deliver every one from Evil, Amen.
 Amen.

By these Instances it does appear, that the English Saxon Language, of which the Normans despoiled us in great Part, had its Beauties, was significant and emphatical, and preferable to what they imposed upon us.

This may suffice for the Mutation of our Language upon the first Cause of it, which was Conquest: I now proceed to the other Two.

Secondly, As to Commerce, the Britains having been of a long Time a Trading Nation, as it generally happens, we have had many Words introduced by that Means; and besides, Britain having been a considerable Time under Subjection to the See of Rome in Ecclesiastical Affairs, the Italians coming over hither to manage the Pope's Concerns, and others for Church Dignities, and many Britains going hence to Rome on account of Ecclesiastical Suits, Priesthoods, Abbacies, and Bishopricks, must unavoidably introduce some Italian Words among us.

Thirdly, As to the particular Properties of a Language, our Tongue has undergone no small Mutation, or rather has received no small Improvement upon that Account; for as to the Greek and Latin, the Learned have, together with the Arts and Sciences (now rendered very familiar among us) introduced Abundance, nay almost all the Terms of Arts in the Mathematicks, Philosophy, Physick, and Anatomy, with many others from them; and many more have we entertained from the Latin, French, &c. for the Sake of Neatness and Elegancy.

So that at this Day our Language, which 1800 Years ago was the ancient British or Welsh, is now a Mixture of Saxon, Teu- tonick,

INTRODUCTION.

Donick, Dutch, Danish, Norman, and Modern French, embellished with the Greek and Latin.

Yet is not this, I think, any Disparagement to the English Tongue as now spoke (for this Change is nothing but what all Languages have been liable to, and have undergone, and do interchangeably participate each with other, having likewise enfranchised many Words from the Latin and Greek, tho' perhaps not so many as we) but it rather makes to the Advantage of its Character; for by transplanting Foreign Words into the Native Soil, and new forming them, we have so enriched it, that now it is become the most Copious and Significant Language in Europe, if not in the World.

Thus Camden said of it in his Time; "That though he would not say the English Tongue was as sacred as the Hebrew, or as learned as the Greek, yet that it was as fluent as the Latin, as courtious as the Spanish, as courtlike as the French, and as amorous as the Italian; so that being beautified and enriched out of other Tongues, partly by enfranchising and indenizing Foreign Words, partly by implanting new ones with artful Composition, our Tongue is as copious, pithy and significant as any other in Europe."

And Dr. Heylin says of it, "That whereas the English Tongue is a Compound of Latin, French, Dutch, &c. it rather adds to its Perfection, than detracts any thing from its Worth, since out of every Language we have culled the most significant Words, and equally participate of what is excellent in them, their Imperfections being rejected: For it is neither so boisterous as the Dutch, nor so effeminate as the French, yet as significant as the Latin, and, in the happy Conjunction of two or more Words in one, little inferior to the Greek."

If then the English Tongue, in the Opinion of these learned Authors, deserved this Character in their Time, how much more now, having since received so considerable Improvements from so many celebrated Writers?

Having given this short Account, by what Steps and Gradations the English Tongue is arrived to be what it now is, I shall proceed to give a brief Account of the Method I have taken in the following Work.

It is not my Design to depreciate the Labours of those worthy Authors, whose Writings of this kind have saved me much Pains: I shall only say, as, facile est inventis addere, in perusing the best Books of this kind extant, I have found in them both a Redundancy and Deficiency; the former of which I have omitted, to make room for the latter, having enriched this with several thousand English Words and Phrases in no English Dictionary before extant.

INTRODUCTION.

As for the Etymological Part, or those Words from Foreign Languages, whence the English Words were derived, I think I am the first who has attempted it in English, except what Mr. Blount has done in his Glossography, which is a very small Part, and those of a Latin Derivation chiefly, besides a small Extract of Dr. Skinner's Etymologicon.

However, I shall not enlarge at present upon the Usefulness of that Part, supposing that such Persons who understand the Languages need no such Information; and as to those who do not, the Etymological Part is separated so distinctly from the rest, being inclosed within Crotchets, that they may pass it over without any manner of Trouble or Inconvenience.

In order to the more easy apprehending the Method I have taken, I shall give the following Account:

1. In those Words of a Northern Derivation, I have generally given the Saxon Word first, from whence the English Word, in all Probability, was derived; and afterwards the Teutonic, Danish, and Low-Dutch, where I have found them in the same, or a cognate Signification.

2. In many Words, for which no Saxon Words are to be found, I have given the Teutonic, Low-Dutch, Danish, or others, where they are to be found of the same or a like Signification, though it is very probable they came to us immediately from the Saxon Tongue; but the Fewness of the Books we have now left in the Saxon Language does not furnish us with them; and inasmuch as it is certain, that the English Saxon is no other than a Dialect of the ancient Teutonic, it appears therefore the more probable.

3. In Words derived from the Southern Languages, I have set down the French, and afterwards frequently the Italian and Spanish, if they have them in the same or a like Signification; and lastly, the Latin, from which probably they were all derived.

4. In Terms of Art, as Anatomy, Chymistry, Logick, Mathematicks, Philosophy, Physick, Surgery, and others, I have generally given the French, if they have them, then the Latin, and afterwards the Greek, from whence they generally proceeded.

5. In many Words of a Latin or Greek Original, not properly Terms of Art, I have likewise in the first Place set the French, afterwards the Latin and Greek, so far complying with those who are of Opinion, that we have them immediately, or in the first Place, from the French; though I cannot entirely give into that Notion, for Reasons which will appear in some of the following Articles.

6. Thus

INTRODUCTION.

6. Thus much in the general, but more particularly as for those Words which the French have very near in Spelling, and also the Latin, I have set down the French first, and after the Latin, from which they are derived.

7. In Nouns, especially those that end in ion, as Salvation, Generation, &c. which are evidently derived from the Latin, to avoid the Swelling of the Book, by setting down the Latin and French Words, I have put F. of L. at the End of the Paragraph, which signifies the Words, Generation, Salvation, &c. are as well French as English literally, which come of the Latin, Salvatio, Generatio, &c. and differ only by the Addition of n at the End.

8. In other Nouns, where the English Word is pure Latin, and the French differs in Spelling, in some Letter or Letters, as Author, L. Auteur, F. I have set the French within a Crotchet, and L. at the End, which denotes the Word to be almost literally Latin.

9. In many Adjectives in ive, as conclusive, &c. which are not found in Latin Dictionaries, though they might be analogically formed, as well as the Adverb conclusive, I have omitted to set L. at the End.

10. In Adjectives and Participles, I have omitted to set down the French, because it appears plain to me, they were rather derived of the Latin than the French, as Desolate, of Desolatus, L. rather than Desolé, F. This may suffice for the rest.

11. As to Verbs, I have for the most part set down the Latin Supines, as the Words from which the English are immediately derived, rather than the Infinitive Moods, especially those of the third Conjugation in Latin, because nearer in the Spelling, as to collect, from Collectum, Supine, rather than Colligere, Infinitive, for the Reason before-mentioned.

I have not confined myself to derive from those Latin Words only, that may be found in Authours call'd Classick, or of the purest Ages of the Latin Tongue; since it is evident we have derived from many Latin Words, which have been handed down to us by Writers of a later Date, Schoolmen, Philosophers, Physicians, Mathematicians, and others.

If any of those Words, given as the Etymon of the English Word, should be thought too remote in Sense or Spelling, it may be sufficient to obviate such an Objection, that nothing is more common in the transplanting Words from one Language to another, than to make considerable Variations; as in the Word Knave, from the Saxon Cnapa, which differs literally and in Sense too; for it signified in Saxon Times no more than Servitor, but now generally is used to signify a dishonest Person. And as to the Spelling, the different Orthography of Nations has so disguised many Words of the same Pronunciation and Signification, that they appear so unlike, that such as are not acquainted with each Language, nor accustomed to Etymological Observations, can hardly discern their Affinity: And besides, very few of the Etymological Words are my own, but I have generally the Suffrage of Somner, Camden, Verstegan, Spelman, Casaubon, Dr. Tb. Hanshaw, Skinner, Junius, Munagius, Minsbew, and other great Names, and approved Etymologists, to bear me out.

To conclude; I have omitted nothing to render this Work as complete, as all the Helps I could come at and other Circumstances would admit of. And I hope, that, considering the vast Variety both of Words and Things, as few Errors have escaped my Notice as could reasonably be expected. If any dissent from me in any Particular, it ought to secure me from Censure, that I pretend only to propose to, and not impose upon, their Judgment; and shall conclude with Horace,

Si quid novisti relictus istis, Candidus imperti: si non, his utere mecum.

like Father, like Son, verb does not only intimate the Nature, but also of Example; as the strength of Imagination and Practice, as the violent Bent of Inclination former. It is true that Children are not always, are generally like their Mother in their Minds; as well as in their Faculties of the former; but in a Blood; and, as for the Features and Complexions of the latter, they often look as if they were cast in the same Mould. But I presume the Point of the Proverb is chiefly directed at their Examples; and that such as are the Parents, as to Vice or Virtue, such are, too commonly, the Children; that the ill Examples of a vicious Father almost universally tend to the debauching a Son; when the good Precepts and Examples of a virtuous Father go a great Way to the forming a virtuous one. Mali coram malum ovum, say the Latins; and Oudtior' in oullas [olden quera], say the Greeks.

Every Man thinks his own Geese Swans.

This Proverb intimates, that an inbred Phylauy runs through the whole Race of Fleish and Blood, and that Self-love is the Mother of Vanity, Pride, and Mistake. It turns a Man's Geese into Swans, his Dung- bill Poultry into Pheasants, and his Lambs into Vanison. It blinds the Understanding, perverts the Judgement, depraves the Reason of the otherwise most modest Distinguishers of Truth and Falshy. It makes a Man so fondly conceited of himself, that he prefers his own Art for its Excellency, his own Skill for its Perfection, his own Composi- tions for their Wit, and his own Productions for their Beauty. It makes even his Vices seem to him Virtues, and his Deformities Beauties; for so every Crow thinks her own Bird fairest, though never so black and ugly. Suum cuique pulchrum, say the Latins.
